Marriages

GARFINKLE—GUILAROFF

The marriage was solemnized, on January 27, at the Prince of Wales Salon of the Windsor Hotel, with Dr. Abramowitz officiating, of Dorothy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Guilaroff, to Mr. Philip Garfinkle, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Garfinkle, of Montreal. The decorations were carried out with flowers and ferns. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of white georgette, heavily beaded. Her veil of silk tulle was arranged with a coronet of pearls and she carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses with a shower of lilies of the valley. Miss Anne Rosenbaum, the maid of honour, wore a gown of peach georgette and silver lace. The bridesmaids were Miss Mamie Miller in nile green georgette with gold lace, and Miss Ruth Miller in turquoise blue taffeta trimmed with lace. All three attendants wore draped headdresses of tulle with rhinestone ornaments and carried Columbia roses. Little Evelyn Hanscher, in a frock of peach coloured crepe de chine, was the train-bearer. The flower girl, little Jeanette Slabotsky, in a lace dress trimmed with rosebuds, carried a basket of sweetheart roses. Mr. Louis Miller was his brother's best man, and the ushers were Sydney Sperber and Philip Pearson. The bride's mother wore a gown of black velvet with a rhinestone ornament and a corsage of American Beauty roses. The mother of the groom wore a black crepe romaine gown heavily beaded with corsage of American Beauty roses.

SCHWARTZ—EPSTEIN

The wedding ceremony of Miss Charlotte Epstein and Mr. Henry Schwartz took place at the Venetian Gardens, Sunday, January 20, at 6 p.m., with Reverend Dr. H. Abramovitch officiating. The bride was given away by her mother and father and the groom by his mother and father. Miss Edith Freedland was maid of honour, and Mr. Wm. Schwartz, brother of the groom, best man. The bridesmaids were Misses Jean Signer, Dorothy Schacher, Beatrice Elman, Amelia Raiche and Henriette Zitrane. The groomsmen were the Messrs. Joe Hornstein, Harry Shmerling, Herman Kluger, Harry Diner and Nathan Epstein. The bride wore a white satin brocaded gown trimmed with diamantes and a train edged with ermine. She wore a diamante headdress in wing design. The bride's mother wore a black crepe romaine dress in oriental design. The groom's mother wore a black and silver brocaded gown with a long train of the same material looped with diamante chains. The maid of honour wore a peach-coloured gown of baronet crepe covered with gold allover lace in hoop effect and French flowers around the waist; Miss Jean Signer, a peach chiffon over silver cloth, and wore a silver headdress; Miss Dorothy Schacher, coral georgette gown with flowered panels and trimmed with pearls, and a pearl headdress; Miss Beatrice Elman, a silve gown of satin metale trimmed with pearls and diamantes; Miss Amelia Raich faconne metale trimmed with squirrel and a floral headdress in nosegay effect; Miss flat crepe embroidered in rhinestones and crystal beads, with court train. Her veil was arranged in coronet effect with orange blossoms. The mother of the bride was gowned in a French dress of beaded black georgette, with large hat. Mrs. Garfinkle, the mother of the groom, wore a dress of black satin faced canton crepe. Miss Olga Guilaroff was maid of honour, and the Misses Vera and Jenny Guilaroff were bridesmaids. Mr. Sam Gold was best man, and the groomsmen were Theodore Guilaroff and Nat Hoffman. During the signing of the register Mrs. Ezra Lozinski sang "Because." Mr. Sidney Guilaroff played the wedding marches. Gifts to the bride's attendants were silver pendants, and to the groomsmen silver pen knives.

The out-of-town guests included Mrs. B. Freedman, N.Y.; Mr. Theodore Guilaroff, Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Klein, Campbellton, N.B.; Miss Sally Fisher, Ottawa; Mr. Roy Frankfurter, Winnipeg, and Mr. and Mrs. Peirce, of Ottawa. The executive committee is headed by Louis Salomon as chairman; Nathan Sloves, treasurer; Adolph Gardner, B.A., L.L.L., honorary secretary, and includes Rabbi H. Cohen, Lionel Coviensky, A. H. Rabin, B. Leavitt, B. M. Weiner, A. Z. Cohen, Samuel Kahn, M. Tannenbaum. Frank H. Berend, who recently conducted the highly successful campaign for the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, is the campaign director.

Mr. Louis Salomon in a recent address, said: "The list of subscribers should be a directory of all of the real Jews of this city."

Campaign headquarters are 412 Henri Julien Avenue, where volunteers will be welcomed and subscriptions may be sent.

The campaign will continue for another week, because of the very severe cold weather which Montreal has experienced of late. The following have contributed to the deficit fund: Samuel Wener, $500; S. Levinson, $500; R. A. Darwin, $500; S. Levinson and sons, $150; Z. Levinson, $50; A. Rudolph, $100; H. Vineberg, $50; Merchants Fur Co., $50; Glickman and Glickman, $200; H. Kellert, $200; Rubin Bros., $200; A. A. Levin, $100; J. Horowitz, $15; J. Albert, $50; Dr. Hart, $25; Nathan Lande, $25; Blumer Bros., $50; A. Sommer, $25; Isaac Freidman, $15.

He managed all the Jewish War Relief and New York Federation drives, and was connected with other drives for the Hospital for Joint Diseases, Keren Hayesod and United Building Fund, etc. Over $30,000,000 has been raised in campaigns with which Mr. Berend has been associated. Mr. Berend directed the Federation of Jewish Philanthrophies' drive in Montreal, the Canadian campaign for the Jewish Theological Seminary, and was at the head of the United Talmud Torah campaign which was launched on January 20. Upon completion of the campaign Saturday, Mr. Berend left for New York.

Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue

Ernest Crown, the eleven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Crown, read the Haph-Torah at the services on January 26. Rabbi Corcos, who introduced this innovation, expects all the boys of the Sabbath School to participate in the services from time to time.

Daughters of Israel Charitable Society Dance

This Society held a dance at the Venetian Gardens on January 27. The convenors are Mrs. R. Firestone, 2045 Park Avenue; Mrs. H. Wagner, 1225 Bernard Avenue; Mrs. Silverman, Waverly Avenue; Mrs. H. Taub, S. Margolese, and Mrs. Bashefsky.

Young People's Society of Shaar Hashomayim

Mr. Irving Gerdy spoke on "Freud, Jewish Pathbreaker in Science," to this society on January 23. Judge Caplan, who was in town for Bnai Brith week, also addressed the gathering. The musical programme was given by Mr. Ivry, violin solo; Miss Bessie Herschorn, piano solo; Anna Garmaise, reading. Informal dancing.

BNAI BRITH INSTALLATION

The newly elected officers of Mount Royal Lodge, No. 729, Independent Order of Bnai Brith, were installed on Thursday night, January 24, at the Mount Royal Hotel. Before an assembly of over two hundred and fifty ladies and gentlemen, Judge Jacob Caplan, of New Haven, president of the District Grand Lodge, No. 1, instructed the officers for the coming year in the duties and responsibilities of a Bnai Brith Lodge.

Judge Caplan was accompanied in his visit to Montreal by Charles Hartman and Max Levy, both of whom delivered addresses at the installation. The visiting brethren and Mesdames Caplan and Hartman arrived in Montreal Wednesday afternoon, and registered at the Windsor Hotel. Thursday noon they were the guests of the executive of the lodge at a luncheon at the Reform Club. The afternoon was spent in visiting the Immigrant Aid Society and the Montreal Hebrew Orphan's Home. The visitors were conducted by Lionel Coviensky, president of the Jewish Immigrant Aid Society. Thursday evening, before the installation, they were entertained by the executive of the lodge at a dinner at the Montefiore Club.

The officers for the coming year are as follows: President, Horace R. Cohen; vice-president, Lewis Faber; secretary, Harry Benjamin; treasurer, Samuel McKinley; financial secretary, Jacob Cohen; monitor, Max Bernfeld; trustees, Simon Hopmeyer, Lionel J. Coviensky, Al. Raginsky; assistant monitor, Joseph Shapiro; warden, L. Gerdy; guardian,

EDITOR CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW:

It appears from the editorial of January 25, that your contributing editor was not satisfied in the private possession of certain comforting views on Judaism and the questions of heresy in the synagogue. He sets the shrill shofar to his lips and calls his readers to contemplate a very strange distemper or disease of religion which attacks only trivial Christians but has never been rampant among the blessed seed of Abraham. Like good and gullible readers, we should all rise and give the hip, hip, hurrah! for the Jews and Judaism and again feel safe in our feeling of superiority over the mere Christians. But I refuse to be good and gullible and undertake in this communication to prove the fallacy of your editor's position and to refute his argument point by point from beginning to end. I feel called upon by my position in the community, and my deep respect for Jewish history, to write this reply and to answer the controversy which your editor has opened by denying its historical reality.

Your esteemed contributing editor asks with well simulated innocence: Why is Judaism practically free from heresy trials and schisms? Now this is is a question only in form; in reality it is an insult to the intelligence of his readers. Any one who boasts the least acquaintance with Jewish history knows that we have had our share of doctrinal schisms that shook the very foundations of Judaism. Was not the controversy between the Pharisees and Sadducees in the first century before the common era a true and real schism, and was it not accompanied by hostilities and bloodshed? Has the editor never heard of the many sects from which sprang Christianity--the greatest schism in the history of Judaism? Has the editor conveniently forgotten the Karaitic schism led by Anan ben David (770 C.E.)? And what about the Maimunists and anti-Maimunists and the burning of Maimuni's works at Acco in 1289? And what about the ban against the study of science in the year 1305? This ban was authorized by no lesser authorities than Solomon ben Aderet and Asher ben Yechiel. And in more recent times was not Judaism engaged in the heated controversies between Chassidim and anti-Chassidim, between Eibeschutz and Emden (1751), between Mendelsohn and his party and East European Jewry? All these historical facts notwithstanding, your editor dares to ask blandly and innocently why Judaism has been practically free from heresy and schism. Heretic, apikorus and schismatic were the very terms used in all these controversies I have enumerated, and yet Judaism is supposed to be practically free of heresy and schism. How little the word "practically" means in the editor's question! Yet he hopes that this one word will save him from the wrath of outraged historical truth.

We shall now proceed to the main argument of the editorial and pick its logical and historical flaws.

"Judaism has but one dogma and that is the existence, rulership and unity of God," so says the editorial. It is to be deplored that by a more extended use of the comma the editor could not have rolled all Taryag commandments into that one dogma. As it is, he claims only one and enumerates three. The existence of God is a dogma which does in no way imply rulership; therefore, rulership is an independent dogma. Neither does existence imply unity, therefore unity is another independent dogma. There is something wrong here with theology or mathematics, or are we to construe the statement in a trinitarian sense?

But the editorial goes on and adduces rabbinical quotations and historical facts, which in the interest of truth we must examine and refute. The rabbis are italicised as saying: "Not I, in my higher realm, but you, with your human needs, fix the form, the measure, the time and the mode of expression for that which is divine." One who has not studied the Talmud may be convinced by this, but I challenge the editor to give me the place, tractate and folio, where this passage is to be found. Indeed, how wonderfully modern it sounds! Almost as if it were made to order for us sinners of 1924.

The contributing editor invokes the shade of Philo the Alexandrian. Philo, who was so far and remote and ignorant of the official Judaism of his day as not to know the Hebrew language!

Maimonicles (1135-1204) is given as an illustration of the "complete liberality and freedom which characterized Judaism." How strange! Was it not Maimonides who formulated the thirteen articles of faith which are recited by all Jews after the morning prayers, and are not these articles true and real dogmas? And does not Maimonides, in his "Foundations of the Thora," discuss and prescribe definite laws for the treatment of the heretic? And did he not assume that Judaism defines for us not only what we must do, but what we must believe? S. Graetz v. III, p. 459.

Again, Geronsides (1288-1344) is quoted in the same connection. And yet it is no secret that Gersonides was considered a half-heretical writer and that his works were little studied by the Jews. The pious took the title of his book, "The Battles of the Lord," to mean "Battles against the Lord," and denounced him as a heretic. One may admire his fearlessness without denying his heretical tendencies.

Further, Ibn Ezra (1092-1167) is taken as an example of the liberality and freedom which characterized Judaism. This example also is very ill-chosen. The pious, official Judaism looked askance at him and denounced his ideas. Nachmanides (1195-1270), the conscience of Judaism, said of him very sarcastically: "Liquid gold should be poured down the throat of that scholar." And yet Judaism and freedom of belief is supposed to be synonymous. It is true that these men, Gersonides and Ibn Ezra were leaders in Judaism, but their teaching was certainly regarded as heresy and is still so regarded by the strict orthodox Jew. The fact that there have been few heresy trials since Spinoza has no bearing whatever on the fact that there have been heresies which the conservative elements openly denounced as such. Is the denunciation of the entire people not sufficient and must it wait on official trials? We are surprised at such reasoning.

We have no quarrel, now, with the editor's dogmas and his conception of Judaism. We have only taken pen in hand to save Jewish history and the history of Judaism from tendential perversion. We hope that we have proven to the readers and to the editor that Judaism has its dogmas and articles of belief, that it had many controversies and schisms, that it knew the meaning of heresy and denounced it as hotly as any other religion, and that even to-day one important section of the Jewish people frankly and openly, and according to its views, rightly stamps the word heresy on the views and doctrines now

In conclusion, I take the liberty of warning the contributing editor of the many ills and evil effects which result from so high-handed a treatment of great subjects as he has treated us to in the editorial of January 25. After all, editorial comment has its proper lines and limitations and a journal for the home, like JEWISH REVIEW, is hardly the place for theological discussion.

IS ZANGWILL A ZIONIST?

After a lengthy discussion the other day, we asked Mr. Zangwill this question and he answered in his inimitable way, "I am the only real Zionist left. You and the Achad Ha-Amists are near-beer Zionists." To which we replied with Zangwill's own epigram, "I'd rather have prohibition than no alcohol at all." Since the 600,000 Arabs cannot be conjured out of Palestine even by the use of the best epigrams Mr. Zangwill can turn out, and since the Jewish world is already committed to an agreement signed by fifty-one of the world's powers, including the U.S.A., and since the Jewish people made the initial mistake 3,500 years ago of choosing Canaan as their land instead of Egypt or Africa or Russia or Canada or the United States, all of which were then available, and since they still insist that Palestine, and only Palestine, is their homeland, the Zionists have therefore resolved to take as many political concessions as we can get and make the most of them. This is just what Dr. Weizmann implied when he said recently at the Canadian Zionist Convention in Toronto, "There, Palestine it is, you must take it or leave it—you cannot change it, and if the upbuilding of Palestine would have been easy, then others would have undertaken it long ago."

It is indeed unfortunate that Mr. Zangwill's public addresses create the impression, so universally shared by people, that he is no longer a Zionist. In this respect he is his own worst enemy. Knowing Zangwill as we do from his writings and after having spent a day discussing this question with him, and hearing him lecture, we are of the opinion that when Zangwill is not juggling and defending his formula of political Zionism, but lets himself be caught off guard, then Zionism—cultural Zionism, Zionism as a philosophy of Jewish life, Zionism as a conquering Jewish romantic ideal pervades his whole speaking and thinking

The intellectual complex we call Israel Zangwill is typical of the Jewish people. It is paradoxical and inconsistent In a great mind inconsistency is a virtue, it is natural; some even say it is the sign of genius This is especially true of Zangwill. One thing is unique about him. He literally thinks and speaks in epigrams. No man is fonder of a pun, a bon mot, and an epigram, than is Zangwill. At its altar everything must worship and, if necessary, be sacrificed.

Some twenty-five years ago Herzl, with a letter of introduction from Nordau, presented himself to Israel Zangwill and explained his scheme of ending the Jewish Goluth by establishing a Jewish political state in Palestine for the Jews Palestine, according to Herzl, was then available. The Turks were willing to sell it to the Jews for the paltry sum of fifteen million dollars. Herzl invited Zangwill to join him in finding a few rich Jews to finance the deal. Zangwill's imagination was fired. He became one of Herzl's friends and co-operators. Zangwill has clung to this simple formula of Zionism. To him Zionism means a land, preferably Palestine (a concession he makes to the psychology and stubbornness of the Jewish people), but if Palestine is not available without Arabs and Christians, then some other land, Uganda, Cyrenaica, South America, Russia, any place where the Jews can flee from oppression and prejudice and establish a political state with an army, navy, courts, ambassadors and full regalia à la Albania and Montenegro. Zangwill, of course, sees all the cultural and spiritual implications of such a State, but he does not concede the possibilities of cultural Zionism in Palestine without such a State. "All or nothing" is his formula. He is a "super-Zionist." On another occasion we called him a Bolshevik Zionist, e.g., a maximum Zionist. We are entitled to call him "names" since he started the name-calling by referring to us as "near-beer Zionists." Zangwill is wedded, sometimes it would seem in the sacramental sense, to the political formula of Zionism "of which I and Jabotinsky are the only living exponents." For this reason he feels keenly that Weizmann bartered our birthright away for a pot of lentils, and a great opportunity was lost, probably forever, when Weizmann "got cold feet" and accepted the vaguely-worded Balfour declaration, instead of demanding a maximum programme. This meant ousting the Arabs from Palestine whilst they were technically enemies at war, and a clear bill of ownership to the land.

Zangwill feels certain that if Dr. Weizmann, who two years prior to the Balfour declaration had offered him the Zionist leadership, and his colleagues had come to him not a week before the Balfour declaration was to be published, and already a fait accomplis, but some time before, and solicited his co-operation with the British Foreign Office, the maximum programme would have been secured, and instead of a Jewish canton in a Semitic Switzerland which England will never leave, we would have had a Palestine that would have been as Jewish as England is English. Zangwill, it seems, cannot forgive nor forget this breach on the part of Weizmann and the Zionist.

Our next question to him was: Well now, conceded for the sake of argument that the milk has been spilt, what next? Would it be politic to give up Zionism altogether? "Is not prohibition better than no alcohol?" Zangwill's answer was, "Well, now we must do the best we can."

Now that it can be told, and Zangwill has told the world that political Zionism as he understood it is dead, and Weizmann admits that such political Zionism, if it ever existed, is dead, has not the time come for Zangwill to throw in his gigantic intellectual forces with those who are striving to create first a Jewish canton in "Semitic Switzerland," in the hope that in time the other cantons will come spiritually and culturally under the dominance of the "Jewish canton, and Palestine will be as Jewish as England is English"? It is, we believe, an undisputed historical axiom that when people of different culture levels meet, the superior cultural group ultimately dominates. So far as the present inhabitants of Palestine are concerned it cannot be denied that the Jewish group represents the superior culture. It is, therefore, only a question of patient effort and faith in ourselves.

There is still another consideration which Mr. Zangwill misses. It is the probability and the possibility of all the adjacent territories to Palestine—in a word, the whole East—becoming again, as it was in the centuries now past, the centre of Jewish life.

It is significant that there is a railroad now in the process of construction, one of whose terminals is in Jaffa and the other in Bagdad. Both Jaffa and Bagdad are Jewish cities. Is it not conceivable that this whole line will attract millions of Jews now exiled and homeless, or, at best, insecurely settled in Eastern Europe, to re-settle this line? The Zionist movement represents the Jew's as well as the world's "Drangnach Osten"—"The movement to the East." Though Jewish individuals may find opportunity for their highest generally material self-expression in the West, the Jewish group soul will only express its peculiar creative, ethical and spiritual genius in the East.

Mr. Zangwill, it is time to stop juggling with formulas and insisting that epigrams will solve the Jewish question. It is time to look reality squarely in the face. If Weizmann got less than he could have obtained in political terms, and there is every reason to believe that you are, in this respect, at least partially correct, it is for the time being done.

Mr. Zangwill, we agree that you rendered a service by telling the world, and especially Great Britain, that our ambassador from Pinsk was no diplomatic match for the political astuteness of a Balfour and the other gentlemen of the British Foreign Office. This is a good criticism, and the place to make it is at the World Zionist Congress. But can it serve you as a conscientious excuse to wash

We did not agree with Dr. Weizmann when he said that there is no bridge between Washington and Pinsk. The fact that Weizmann is now in America endeavoring to constitute the Jewish agency of people from Washington as well as Pinsk proves that he was wrong. Even so, we do not now agree with those who maintain that you are not a Zionist, Mr. Zangwill.

The Zionist movement is too important a matter for world Jewry to permit trifling matters of personality or visionary formulas to stand in the way. We shall hail that day as blessed when Zangwill again takes his rightful place in the front ranks of Zionist leadership.

Barnet R. Brickner

Well, the Zangwill lecture evening was far from the bang-up occasion we expected. We saw Zangwill, but in strict deference to the truth it should not be said that we heard him without outside aid. Part of the blame lies with the accursed acoustics of Massey Hall and part to the limitations of a man who as a speaker is a justly famed author and playwright. So in order to arrive at the conclusion that we were disappointed, we had to receive some assistance from the gentleman to our right, who is proficient in lip-reading. Even he failed at occasional moments when Zangwill buried his head and burrowed around among his sheaf of crackling papers, or bent down and tied up his boot lace.

There were several audiences besides the usual ones established by price. There was the group which heard most of what Zangwill said, but it was a small one. Then there were those who heard part and those who had a word of wisdom only every now and then. The very last group could not be called an audience, because it heard nothing. Its stoicism and docility entitle it to praise and its manners were above reproach, but there was never a moment when we did not fear that a horde at last rebellious would move down to better seats. The people who caught just an occasional word were studies in themselves. Their faces bore such expressions of strain and chagrin as to make a man with a cough afraid of his life. These are doubtless the ones who went home and said absentees hadn't missed much.

There were plenty of absentees, causing great, dark islands in what should have been the conventional sea of faces, and although we didn't anticipate that the entire listening community would be present for the sake of a few stranded Ukrainians, still such a notable as Zangwill is one that the Jewish people should delight to honor, or at least come to see out of curiosity. He was well worth seeing, too, a spare figure of a man, with young eyes, flying white hair, very Jewish cast of face. He spoke conversationally with the accent of a cultured English gentleman, keeping hands and arms close to his body except when he was pecking about in that amazing heap of notes.

But here was a man heralded everywhere as the prophetic voice of the Jewish people or as a thinker among thinkers. We expected words of liquid fire, so to speak, a message flashed from the heights, something to feed on intellectually for a long time to come. We don't know yet just what it is we wanted Zangwill to say, but we do know that he didn't say it or anything like it. What he did do right off the bat was to explain that he has been unfairly abused for saying that there is no hope for a Jewish political state in Palestine, since Weizmann himself is saying it. Then he pottered around with other subjects rather disconnectedly, shedding no new light anywhere except upon the subject of anti-Semitism, which he treated with common sense. This pleased us, because we have always said, despite the oceans of ink dedicated to proving the causes of anti-Semitism, that there are no causes, only racial feeling, and we liked the way Zangwill agreed with us.

Zangwill did flash out inimitably a few times in wit and humor, but remember that he had spoken at the Canadian Club earlier in the day and probably poured out such a horn of plenty there that he had nothing better than tag ends by the time he got to us at Massey Hall. We don't go so far as to say that Zangwill can't make a good speech, given a kindlier setting, but the fact is, he didn't this time. He had nothing much to say and he said it.

We have another theory too, but it is strictly ours and therefore too much can not be claimed for it. It is our suspicion that, no matter what it is announced that Zangwill will talk on to Jews, it is always pretty much the same except that in one city he shuffles the pages of that notebook a little differently than in others. His jokes are pretty much always the same too, we will wager, and they really are good, but a good lecture (such as you expect from a scholar with the grasp and the clarity of thought that Zangwill has) is something more than a succession of stories and wise cracks

Dear Girls and Boys:

Once on a time (which is the way that Kipling begins his stories) I read a Chinese legend that told of the makers of beautiful vases. And tucked away in the story was this thought . . . "When a person enjoys the beauty of a vase, it is because his soul responds to the beauty of the soul of the maker." . . . Think it over! If you have a kindred spirit, you will know just what it means. Your kindred spirit may be a girl or boy chum who likes the things you like (whether those things be pink ribbons, books of adventure or many-coloured sundaes, matters not), or, best of all, somebody who thinks and loves the things that you think and love. Because knowing things means getting to understand them, and after all there is nothing more wonderful than having friends who understand our thoughts and our dreams. It's almost like a secret society. Those on the outside can't possibly understand what it's all about, and sometimes think it's funny; but the initiated members have the good times all to themselves. . . . However, to come back to our potters, who think of beautiful things as they while away the hours in moulding grey clay into things of joy. Naturally some of their spirit of liveliness is reflected in their handicraft, just as a nice happy thought in one's soul will bring a smile in one's eyes. And smiley eyes, are way nicer than smiley lips, 'tis said. . . . What I was wondering was whether we couldn't sort of bring a little of that old doctrine into our everyday lives. F'instance, when you set the table, think of doing it beautifully set the table, think of doing it beautifully, and then watch, look and listen, for kindred spirits! Because the person who remarks that the table is looking particularly nice, is bound to be a sure-enough one. Or when you tie a hair-ribbon, or put books away, or play music, or write a letter! It's bound to make a diff, if you're happy inside.

And now, let's see. I want us to get acquainted a lot faster than we have been. How about it? There are so many of you, and only two of us, plus Ye Maker of Limericks, who drops in only once in awhile, so you'll have to come to us. Some philosopher or other said, "Show me a man's friends and I'll know the man." And so I'm going to ask you to come more often with your stories and letters and jokes, and with everything else that interests you, and TO BRING YOUR FRIENDS. Don't forget that last . . . BRING YOUR FRIENDS. Come along, then, we want heaps and heaps and heaps of letters from you all, about anything or everything, or both!

Our competition, which closes on February 3, is on "Winter." Let's have your thoughts on "Winter," in verse or in prose. I suppose the difficulty will be not what to say, but what not to say, because there is so much doing during our winter that we can write about. Send your entry in at once. The earlier, the better. And tell your friends about it too. Prizes—of course!

Cousinfully,
Judith.

MAIL BAG

Dear Cousin David:

In the last REVIEW you said you was jealous because nobody is writing you, so I thought I would. I am sending in an entry for the competition.

MY BEST FRIEND—A DOG

My Daddy wouldn't buy me a bow wow-wow,
My Daddy wouldn't buy me a bow wow-wow,
I had a little pussy, I was very proud of it.
But I'd rather have a bow-wow-wow.

Freda Foreman,
9 years old.

Dear Freda:

Welcome to our page. It is a pity that your little verse was a little late for our competition. But we're having a special poetry contest right now, and perhaps you will send us an entry. Let us hear from you quite often.

Cousin-fully,
David.

Dear Cousin Judith:

As soon as I read that you wished us to send in our ideas for the new contest I couldn't refrain from sending mine in right away, and I do hope it is fit to be used. I love stories or letters, or poems with a motto or a moral, and if you approve of it, I'd love to write to a contest like that. Maybe we might have a mixture and have autobiographies such as:

The autobiography of an umbrella, sword, a dime, a doll, etc.

We almost thought we were going to have a snowless winter in Ottawa, but on December 27 it began to snow, and it's snowed and snowed and winter sports have been glorious.

I am going to get a pair of snowshoes this winter. I have been out skating at every opportunity I have had, and one of my many ambitions is to be a good hockey player, because at our school we have a girl's hockey team.

Best wishes! I remain a devoted cousin of the REVIEW Junior Section.

FANNY FLEMING.

P.S. Thanks for the birthday wishes! I am enclosing an original of my poem for the contest, and sincerely hope it is fit to be used.

Dear Fannie:

The "Maker of Limericks" peeped over our editorial shoulder at your letter, and together we decided that we would really have a contest such as you suggest, at some future date.

You will have a good time with your snowshoes—of that, I'm sure! I've played hockey a few times; so I know just how much you will enjoy yourself. Your poem arrived too late for our competition, but we will print it, alfee samee. And see that you are in time for this contest.

Cousin Judith.

Dear Cousins,

I hope everybody had a nice holiday, since the snow and ice is here at last. I know you (Cousin Judith) likes to receive suggestions all the time. Well here's one—How about having a picture put in the REVIEW for us cousins to paint, and make it look as real as possible. I've read "Just David," and rather enjoyed it. I'm a waiting for that surprise, cousin Judith—I'm a very inquisitive girl. (Exagerating.)

M. P. O.

Dear M. P. O.,

I'm glad to hear you talk of snow and ice, because perhaps you'll tell us about what you do during the winter. Do you skate, or ski?

I've read "Just David" and it was with books, and it will come along in due time.

I'm afraid we won't be able to have the pictures you speak of. The printer, who rules us all (he really is a cruel demon-ogue with ideas all his own) is "agin the notion" . . . . . so, for the meanwhile we'll have to content ourselves with pen-pictures instead of the other kind. And as you know, a pen-picture is rather difficult to draw. And, therefore, we'll have a good time, for it is rather more fun doing the difficult things, n'est-ce pas? Do come again.

Cousin Judith.

PETERBOROUGH

A gathering was held on Sunday, January 27, at 2.30 p.m., for the purpose of forming a branch of the Hadassah at the synagogue ante-room which was decorated with flowers and bunting. Mrs. H. Zacks and Mrs. L. Green were in charge of refreshments. Officers elected for the following year: Mrs. L. Green, president; Mrs. H. Zacks, vice-president; Mrs. M. Fine, treasurer; Mrs. M. Botnick, secretary; executive committee, Mrs. J. Fine, Mrs. H. Abramson, Mrs. Ragour, Mrs. L. Florence, Mrs. S. Levine and Mrs. A. Botnick. Amount collected for initiation fees, $50.

BRANTFORD

Miss Alice Gazer is visiting friends in Cleveland.

Mrs. J. Lipovitch has returned from Detroit, where she was visiting her sisters.

Harry Wise of Paris was in Brantford for the sleigh party.

Miss Sybil Cohen, of Detroit, visited her sister, Mrs. A. Nadill, 100 Eagle Avenue, over the week-end.

Mr. Dave Nadell, who was spending a month in New York, has returned to his home, 116 Eagle Avenue.

Last Wednesday evening about twenty young folks gathered at the home of Miss Jean Sacks for a sleigh ride into the country, after which they drove to the home of Miss Anne Stemeroff, Terrace Hill Street, for warm lunch. A toast was given by Miss Bessye Stemeroff to Mr. Max Noble, a prospective bridegroom. His fiance is Miss Gertrude Kurtz, of New York. Dancing followed.

* * *

Mrs. M. Hoffman and daughter have returned to their home in Toronto, after visiting Mrs. H. Noble, Market Street.

Engagements

The engagement is announced of Gertrude, only daughter of Mrs. L. Kurtz, Bow Park, New York, to Mr. Max Nobel, youngest son of Mrs. H. Noble, Brantford.

SHEA'S

Mme. Calliope Charisse, the Greek dancer, with her ten children, will headline next week's bill at Shea's Theatre, appearing in interpretations of the classic dance. Although Athens is the native home of Mme. Charisse and her children, their fame has spread through Europe. Mme. Charisse, who has made a life study of the classical dances of Greece, has been decorated by the French government for her contribution to classic art.

Joe E. Brown, the comedian, made a hit last season with the Greenwich Village Follies, and he will present here the act that aroused such hilarity in New York. A company of six appear in his support.

Helen Stover, prima donna, has a truly wonderful voice. Eva Puck and Same White, musical comedy favourites, will appear in a musical and dancing act entitled "Opera vs. Jazz."

Russell Carr and 'Orace will present a military ventriloquial act and Shea's News Review completes the bill.

S. ABRAHAMSON ADDRESSES SOCIETY

S. Abrahamson, barrister and ex-Rhodes scholar, addressed the Winnipeg Psychology Society on "The Psychology of Genius." He dealt with the nature of emotion great men inspired in the people and the universality of genius. In analysing the nature of genius, the speaker contended that the definition given to it of being the capacity for taking infinite pains was inadequate, and that it consisted of the co-existence of two qualities, sincerity and insight into reality.

ORPHANAGE CLUB NEWS

Mr. A. M. Silverson, assistant cub master, took charge of the meeting held in the Jewish Orphanage recently. Cub Master Shapera and Assistant Cub Master Silverson will take charge of the meetings alternately, so that there will be two meetings weekly.

WEINLOS-GARFIN

A pretty wedding took place at the Haddon Hall on January 13, when Esther, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Garfin, 10169 118th Street, was united in marriage to Max Weinlos, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Weinlos of 10112 95th Street. Rev. A. Pinsky officiated. At 5.30 p.m. the bridegroom, supported by his brother, Morris Weinlos, the best man, took his place under the silken canopy of blue and white. To the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin, played by Miss Stella Freifield, the bridal procession entered, led by little Buddie Spaner, ring-bearer. The two little flower girls, Sylvia Davis and Rosalind Karp, dressed in pink georgette followed, carrying baskets of narcissi. The bride, who entered on the arm of her father, wore a Grecian gown of white beaded georgette, draped and caught at one side with a beaded buckle. Her only ornament was a string of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom. She carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and carnations. The bride was attended by Miss Muriel Ostry, maid of honor, who wore a French beaded gown of pale mauve georgette over maize, and the bridesmaids, who were Miss Sara Freifeld, in apricot satin with an overdress of white beaded net. Miss Becky Grieadorf in pale blue taffeta, Miss Pearl Goldstein (Calgary), in pale Canton crepe, and the Misses Dora and Goldie Hiller in peach georgette. Their head-dresses were sil-

the bride was gowned in black Canton crepe, heavily beaded, and wore a black picture hat. Mrs. Weinlos, mother of the bridegroom, wore a gown of black satin. Mrs. O. Friedman, sister of the bridegroom, wore blue Canton crepe with picture hat to match. The ushers were Messrs. I. Garfin, H. Weinlos, Max Garfin and Joe Garfin. Following the ceremony dinner was served, after which a reception was held, about three hundred guests being present. The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing. Mr. and Mrs. Weinlos left on the midnight train on their honeymoon trip to California, many of the guests being at the station to give the happy couple a jolly send-off. The bride's travelling attire was a black lace dress, and a gray Marvella coat trimmed with beaver. A black satin hat completed the costume.

LITHUANIAN JEWISH MINISTER RESIGNS

Dr. Soloweltchik Concludes Useless to Continue Jewish Ministry in Face of Government Attitude

Kowno (J.T.A.).—Dr. Sampson Rosenbaum, Minister for Jewish Affairs in Lithuania, has resigned from office. The resignation is no surprise in view of the government's distinctly hostile attitude toward the ministry in refusing it the meagre financial assistance it had been receiving.

The hostile attitude of the Government Party and the Cabinet was first evinced a short while ago when the Budget Committee refused to include in its budget the Ministry's subsidy which amounted to about a thousand dollars a year. The Seim took the same action with regard to the White Russian Ministry.

The position taken by the government in this matter is a natural corrallary of its stand with regard to the entire question of minority rights. When the question came up before the League of Nations, the representatives of Lithuania refused to give their written guarantee that the rights of the minorities would be protected. This was later endorsed by the Seim which decided that it was not necessary to give a written pledge.

Dr. Rosenbaum, nevertheless, still hoped for a change in the government's attitude. In fact, during his recent visit to London, he declared in an interview that the political condition of the Jews in Lithuania, although not altogether favourable, was much better than in other countries. That he was forced to change his optimistic view on his return can be seen by his resignation.

Zangwill Speaks

In an address on "Jewish World Problems," Israel Zangwill, introduced by Rabbi Brickner, dealt at some length with the present status and future possibilities of the Zionist movement. Culturally, he said, Zionism was still a vital force, but politically, in so far as it concerned Palestine, it was dead. Had the Arabs, who came to Britain as enemies suing for peace, been asked to leave Palestine, the Jews might have gone in, but, as things stood, the Arabs were there, could not be driven out without war, and the best that Jewry could hope for now as a sort of "Semitic Switzerland," composed of cantons of Arabs and Jews.

That did not mean, however, that Judaism was without an objective, the striving for which would serve to unite scattered Jewish nationals in the bonds of a common purpose. To the speakers' way of thinking, there was ample room for concerted action on the part of Judaism in the succoring the members of their race who in Eastern Europe and elsewhere had borne the brunt of the fanatical race hatreds roused by the war. But Jews would have to recognize that any steps they might make in this direction would have to be taken as nationals of the country in which they happened to reside, and not as prospective citizens of a Jewish state.

Mr. Zangwill, however, did not altogether close the door on hope of the creation of a Jewish homeland. If anti-Semitism continued to grow in strength and the suffering of Jews continued to increase, ultimately the Jews might be forced to seek a territory somewhere outside of Palestine. There was still plenty of room in such South American countries as Brazil and the Argentine, for instance. Incidentally, in this connection the speaker mentioned that the Jews might have had a Province in Canada if they had not been ten years too late. He himself had gone to Sir Wilfrid Laurier to ask for territory for the Jews in Canada and had been told that if he had come ten years earlier his request might have been granted.

With that pleasantry, the speaker turned to explain what he meant when he shocked the American Jewish Congress in New York recently by suggesting that the future of Zionism was not as promising as it might be. He had been the first political Zionist, and was almost beginning to think that he was the only one of that creed left. But facts had to be faced, unpleasant though they might be.

To-day in Palestine there were 600,000 Arabs, who were going to stay there. The Jews numbered only one in nine, and they owned only four per cent. of the land. The only way to get rid of the Arabs now was to buy them out, and that was something of "an uphill job." The Arabs might have been asked to go elsewhere immediately following Allenby's victory, and they would have had to go. But the British officers in the field favoured the Arabs more than the Jews, and leaders of the Zionist movement had, to put it bluntly, "got cold feet." That meant that an opportunity which might have served the aims of the movement had gone forever. There was no danger of the British leaving the Jews in Palestine to their fate. Britain was there, and so long as her interests and, incidentally, the protection of the Suez Canal demanded it, she would remain. "But, politically, we must admit that Palestine will be only a sort of Semitic Switzerland. We would like to drive out the Arabs. I would like to drive out the Arabs, but we can't, without war. Personally, I gave up my ideal for the sake of peace. We've had enough of war. That means a series of cantons in Palestine—there the Arabs and there the Jews, and that's the best you can do," he said.

Continuing, Mr. Zangwill analysed the position of the scattered sections of the Jewish race to show how feeble was their hope of political domination of Palestine. There were 16,000,000 Jews in the world to-day. Palestine few Jews wanted to return, particularly those in America.

On the other hand, the condition of some Jews was so desperate that they had to go somewhere, and in getting them to that somewhere, Mr. Zangwill believed, Judaism would find an aim which would serve to unite the race. The suffering of the Jews in the Ukraine, for instance, had been so terrible as to be almost beyond belief. In 1920 at Kieff eighty young Jewesses had been sold to brutal ruffians and a large number of males killed and their bodies thrown to swine, "who enjoyed their meal under the protection of armed guards." In another town all the women had been outraged and seventy children had been killed, their heads cut off and sent in barrels to the man who had ordered the crime.

His explorations in this direction concluded, the speaker turned to discuss the reasons for the existence of anti-Semitism. In his opinion it was due, not to the fact that the Jew was rich or poor, Bolshevist or capitalist, but to the fact that men of any given nation hated men of another. "I find here that you have no great love for the United States," he remarked. The Jews were a nation, but so scattered that their frontier ran from one end of the world to the other. For that reason they seemed to be special objects of this universal national hatred.

Anti-Semitism seemed to be on the increase, even in the United States. There was a Haman who would probably give all the Jews of the country a ride in his cars if only they would ride out of the country. Even in Montreal there had been a deliberate attempt recently to stir up feeling against the Jews.

In the face of all this, where was the Jew to look for respite? "The only hope of the Jew is a strong League of Nations which will protect our race all over the world. We can't save ourselves alone. We must look to the growth of world justice, and we must help to secure that justice, not only for our own sake, but for the sake of all oppressed peoples, Christian or Jewish. And we must not stand idly by. We must be prepared to work for the peace of the world and international justice, and we must stand behind the League of Nations."

There lay the only means by which Judaism could cope with anti-Semitism. One day the Jew might be driven to seek territory elsewhere than in Palestine, if anti-Semitism reached a pitch where it made the life of the Jew intolerable in any country other than in his own. But in the meantime he had to strive to serve his fellows as a national of the country in which he lived.

In closing, Mr. Zangwill ridiculed the suggestion that the Jew's aim was to dominate the world, politically and materially. The Jew wanted to dominate the world spiritually, and even if he succeeded only to the extent of enforcing the Mosaic code, he would materially improve conditions generally.

One of the speaker's asides well illustrates his sense of humor. There was in England, he said, a very clever bit of poetry, only eight words long; "How odd of God to choose the Jews."

The lecture was given under the auspices of the Jewish Immigrant Aid Committee, which is supervising the bringing of 6,000 Russian Jews to Canada. Rabbi Brickner made an appeal for the contribution of funds to the work of this committee. The money collected is noted, with names and amounts in another column of the REVIEW.

Following the lecture Mr. Zangwill was entertained at the Primrose Club.
